

Lou Williams questions if Suns are even trying to make playoffs

The Phoenix Suns 2024-25 season continues to disappoint fans and analysts with a loss to the Los Angeles Lakers this past Sunday, got former sixth man of the year Lou Williams talking about the team's effort. Lou Williams is certainly not the only one who's reached this conclusion after seeing the incident between Suns superstar Kevin Durant and Head Coach Mike Budenholzer's little incident during a timeout. Lou Williams criticized Phoenix's urge to make the playoffs, per Fanduel TV.

"It looks like a team that is not having a lot of fun playing together and doesn't look like they enjoy the coaching and direction they are getting... it doesn't pass the vibe check." Lou Williams said and Williams talked about how talented this team is and how they have issues on the defensive side of the court every game, and on top of that Budenholzer gets into it with one of his superstar guys almost every game.

Williams also talked about how the Suns have lost FIFTEEN of their last twenty one games, which really shows the disconnect between the players and the coaching staff's style of play. Williams concluded with "I don't even know if this is a team that's even trying to get in the play-in. I think they're trying to wash their hands with this thing,"

How does a team that is being led by THREE of the best basketball players in the world; Kevin Durant, Devin Booker, and Bradley Beal struggle to get it together? The accolades these three have combined are mind blowing yet they can't separate their differences to come together as a real threat to take the Western Conference. This team is a couple games BEHIND the Dallas Mavericks who might have to forfeit games with how many injuries they have.

Is this enough to get Phoenix into the Play-In tournament, and get Suns' fans excited again?

We will see Monday as they welcome Toronto to the desert.